Art Unit: 2882

Claims 13, 15-26, 28-36, and 40-50 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. The limitations conveyed by "certification image" and "training image" are unclear. How are these images different from other stored images? Claims 19 and 20 recite how the apparatus may be operated rather than defining structural limitations as required.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 13, 15-26, 28-36 and 40-50 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Verbinski (6552346) in view of Rapiscan Level 3 cited by applicant. Verbinski teaches a security inspection system comprising x-ray source 18, object to be inspected 10, x-ray detectors 26, computer 36 including a database of contraband (threat) images and computer monitor 38. Monitor 38 simultaneously displays two images which may be from either an on going inspection or from the computer's hard drive or floppy disk. The stored images are referred to as reference or comparison images, and some are of inspection objects containing contraband while some are of inspection objects that do not contain contraband (line 51 of column 7 to line 36 of column 8 and lines 52-64 of column 10). The system further comprises an operator tutorial (lines 47-50 of column 7). Means are provided to send a suspect image to a supervisor (lines 2-4 of column 8). Lines 41-46 of column 1 suggest the invention be used to inspect suitcases, which would obviously necessitate conveyor means. Verbinski does not mention certification or training images, but it would have been obvious to use Verbinski's images for training or certification since all operators must be trained and certified. Verbinski does not teach measuring or recording operator performance. Rapiscan comprises software added to x-ray inspection systems to teach operators/screeners how to inspect images for threats such as guns, knives and bombs by displaying to the operator images of baggage containing such items. The software tracks an operator's performance and reports it to supervisors (page 1). Various performance reports are described. It would have been obvious to equip the Verbinski system with the Rapiscan software in order to train screeners since that was its purpose. The various steps and criteria for screener certification that are claimed cannot be regarded as novel since they would have been prescribed by certification agencies and would therefore have been obvious.

Applicant's arguments filed May 9, 2005 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant has failed to delineate the limitations conveyed by "certification images" and "training images".

Applicant broadly asserts that the references fail to teach the claimed invention but offers no logic or evidence. There is no comparison in applicant's response to the prior art teachings and the current claim limitations.

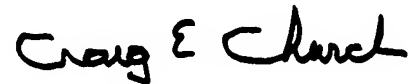

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

Art Unit: 2882

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
